1.3.1 Institution integrates crosscutting issues relevant to Professional Ethics, Gender, Human Values, Environment and Sustainability into the Curriculum

The DJPS has included a number of different courses into its curriculum in order to address problems that are relevant to a wide range of topics, including gender, environmental sustainability, human values, and professional ethics. Some classes are geared towards enhancing professional abilities, while others are designed to instill general human values and raise awareness about the need of environmental sustainability. Taking this strategy guarantees that pupils will grow in all aspects of their lives.

Concerns pertaining to gender: This helps students become more aware of the gender issues that are common all over the globe, since gender is present in every part of their life, both personally and professionally.

The committees of the institution, namely the Women Empowerment cell and the Women Protection cell have been established. The social, economic, and political components of gender, as well as the challenges that are linked with them, are more understood. It is possible to resolve the gender disparities that are present in society via talks. Debates are based on facts that are obtained from individuals' shared experiences, literature, and film.

The inculcation of human values that encourage ethical and professional conduct within one's area has the potential to make a substantial contribution to the development of human values and professional ethics (HV & PE). Through the cultivation of harmony at all levels, students may improve their ability to engage with others from a variety of backgrounds. Women's Day Celebrations and other programmes that empower women work towards the goal of enhancing and reshaping the personalities of the participants.

Taking into consideration the importance of gender equality, the DJPS has developed a Women Empowerment cell with the purpose of motivating female students to fight for gender equality.

Events that are focused on women's empowerment are often organised by the Women Empowerment Cell. These events include quizzes, elocution competitions, and essay contests. The college organises a variety of events, including Water Conservation Day, Haritha Haram, the Swachh-Bharath programme, the Swachhta Oath, and Say No to Plastic, in order to increase awareness among students about environmental and sustainability problems. These events include seminars, guest lectures, workshops, and other similar activities. The Oath of Pharmacist and the Code of Conduct are designed to foster discipline among students, as well as professional ethics and a sense of duty towards society.
