4.2.1 Library is automated using Integrated Library Management System (ILMS), subscription to e resources, amount spent on purchase of books, journals and per day usage of library

The library, which has an extensive collection of books, journals, magazines, and periodicals, is the centre for knowledge. Students and professors utilise the library's resources, such the DELL NET programme, to search for books by title, author, etc. Faculty members, postgraduate students, and undergraduate students each have their own separate reading area.

We have an adequate number of employees, including a librarian, assistant librarian, and technical assistant, in accordance with PCI standards, to maintain the library and issue books. Separate records are kept for staff and students' return registrar, books issuance, and admission registrar.

On all working days, the library is open from 10:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

There is also a stand-alone electronic library with features like e-journal and e-book subscriptions. A comprehensive library that is rich in resources and has 24/7 internet access for staff and students supports education.

In accordance with Pharmacy No. of Titles-399, No. of Volumes-3200, International Journal-04, National Journal-05, Delnet Access: In agreement. Software: Absolutely Delnet: Indeed, Textbooks, reference books, magazines, national and international publications, and other accessible materials available online complement our library.

More than 50 pupils may be seated at once in the library. Students may utilise 15 computer terminals equipped with the newest software and free internet access. The library is well-furnished to increase students' comfort levels and has a printing and photocopying station for their convenience. Students have free access to the internet for downloading. Students may access e-books and other electronic resources via Dell Net through library subscriptions, and they can get free printed periodicals from both domestic and foreign publishers for their literature review.

Students have free access to the library, where they may choose the book they need for a certain problem. To help with their GPAT preparation, final-year students may release up to three books, while all other students may only issue a maximum of two.
